Switching Command Log Files

The SW command is used to switch to the next command log file that has been defined for a particular report, before the current file is filled.

If the maximum number of command log files designated for a report is exceeded by this request, Review will begin writing over the file that contains the oldest data.

Note:
This command does not negate normal command file switching, nor does it switch the command log file for any report other than the one selected.

▶ To switch to the next command log file

1. Enter the SW command on the selection line preceding the report name on the Started Reports screen.
