Description

A status bar control is an alternative to the traditional status bar that is created by setting the dialog's HAS-STATUS-BAR attribute. However, the status bar control offers a range of advanced features which the traditional Natural status bars do not support. These new features include a Windows-like appearance with (optionally) recessed or raised sections - referred to as "panes" - and (optionally) a sizing grip (see illustration above). The status bar panes are themselves dialog elements, and are therefore documented under their own section below. Note that, although it is possible to define a status bar control with no panes, such a status bar control can only display a single text string. In order to use any of the advanced features, it is necessary to define one or more panes.

A status bar control can be displayed either at the top or bottom of a dialog. Furthermore, a dialog may have more than one status bar control. Status information set via the dialog's STATUS-TEXT attribute is automatically redirected to the status bar control (if any) specified by the dialog's STATUS-HANDLE attribute.

You can set a minimum pane height for the status bar control using the ITEM-H attribute. The distance between the items and the status bar control's border is determined with the MARGIN-X and MARGIN-Y attributes.
